POPULIST PLANS.

An Interview With Senator William V. Allen.

OMAHA, Nov. 16.—Senator William V. Allen, Nebraska's senior representative in the United States senate and the recognized leader of the Populists in both houses of congress, has been in Omaha for two days, previous to going to Washington to be in attendance at the reconvening of the national legislature.

"It goes without saying," said the senator, "that the Populist party will have a presidential ticket in the field, and that it will be the only one of the old parties that will be outspoken in favor of the free coinage of silver at 16 to 1.

"As to the reorganization of the senate, I don't think the Populist senators will cut the figure that has been predicted for them. I believe the Republicans and Democrats will agree upon a plan of organization that will not depend upon Populist assistance I do not believe the Populists will care to enter into negotiations for a division of the senate spoils.

"The Populist national committee will probably meet in January to arrange for the Populist national convention. I am in correspondence with Chairman Taubeneck to have the meeting take place in Washington, so that the Populist delegation in congress may be consulted on the questions to be decided. I am in favor of holding the convention after those of the Republicans and Democrats. The convention will doubtless go to some western city."

MURDERED FIVE MEN

Colored Fugitive From Kentucky With Gory Record.

CHARLESTON, W Va, Nov 16.—Andrew Jackson, a negro fugitive from Kentucky, with a record of five murders, was arrested by local officers at the instance of a detective from Middlesboro, Ky.

In 1890 Jackson killed Charles Burns at Ashland, Ky; in 1891, Ben Bose, white, at Jellico, Tenn., the same year, Alfonso, Patton, colored, at Batesville, Ky; in 1893, John Garner, colored, at Manchester, Ky, and about a month ago, Major Campbell, colored, at Middlesboro, Ky. All the murders were for the purpose of robbery except one, which was done in a quarrel over a woman.

The largest sum ever realized from one victim was $83 from Campbell. Jackson is in jail awaiting requisition papers from Kentucky.

DIDN'T KNOW HER NAME.

Miss Nellie Lozier Has Discovered Her Last Name Is Slack.

BRAZIL, Ind., Nov. 16.—Miss Nellie Lozier, 32, has received notice that her name is Slack instead of Lozier. Through the pension department she discovered that her mother died two years ago at Cleveland. Among the papers forwarded here she found that her father was killed in the late war; that when a babe she wandered away from her home in New York and was sent to an orphan asylum, from which she was sent to Sandusky, O., with a carload of orphans. She was there adopted by a man named Lozier, and after his death by another family, who, she says, mistreated her and she ran away at the age of 14. Her mother supposed the child was dead and gave up the search.

VILLAGES BURNED

And Many Persons Reported Killed.

BURDEN OF OFFICIAL REPORTS.

According to Turkish Dispatches Armenians Are Charged With All Manner of Lawlessness—Palace of the Governor Attacked—Revolutionists Preparing For an Aggressive Campaign.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 16.—Official dispatches received here contain additional accounts of Armenian lawlessness It is reported that the Armenians have attacked the villages of Forsakh, Bitchli and Behransis, near Zeitoun, firing 57 houses in all They also burned the village of Kurbel and one Mohammetan was burned alive. Eighteen Mussulmans of both sexes were killed and 15 wounded by the rioters at Tchoukour Hissar. The town of Tchoukour Hissar was totally destroyed. Several Musaulman villages have been attacked in the Azirlon and Tchokmerzemenk districts. The sultan has sent fresh peremtory instructions to the valis of the different districts where the disorders have occured, as well as to the military commanders, telling them that they must promptly restore order by the just and equitable treatment of both Christians and Mohammetans.

Bloody Conflicts Reported.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The Turkish legation at Washington has received the following communication from the sublime porte:

"The Armenian revolutionists of Sivas after taking out of their shops all the merchandise attacked the Mussulmans. They fired from the windows of their houses and wounded severely one soldier. A pistol shot broke the window of the rooms occupied by the governor general. They also attacked the village of Mardjilik, killed many Mussulmans and committed many offenses against law and order. The authorities of Arabguir discovered 40 bombs which the Armenian agitators had buried in order to blow up public buildings, such as the barracks, the palace of the governor, the military storehouse and the like. The fire that broke out in the city originated from bombs prepared for that purpose The Turkish population of Arabguir being attacked by 1,500 rioters, perfectly armed and equipped, telegraphed to the imperial government for protection. The provincial authorities neglected absolutely nothing to preserve peace.

"The Armenian rioters of Erzindjan fired upon the Mussulmans and attacked the palace of the governor, the military station and other buildings. They were repulsed, however, by the military.

"The Armenian revolutionists of Arabguir, having attacked the Mussulman quarter of Kuejinar, a bloody conflict occurred between Mussulmans and Armenians. Another conflict took place near the Saroy (Van) between Armenian brigands and gendarmes. The brigands fled to the village of Bogazkean, but they were dispersed. Many gendarmes were killed and wounded

"The agitators, Kircer and Kevork, of the village of Kemer (Sivas) who fired shots, and in whose houses ammunition and cartridges were discovered, have been arrested.

"More than 5,000 Armenian revolutionists are at Tchoukmerzen (Adana) and it is reported they are preparing for active aggression."

MISSION WORK.

Ex-President Harrison Addresses Presbyterians.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The Carnegie Music hall was filled last night with a great crowd of Presbyterians interested in foreign missions. The platform was occupied principally by ministers, among them being Dr. John Hall, Rev. Dr. Delafield, Rev. Charles E. Thompson and Rev. Dr. John B. Shaw. The announcement that ex-President Harrison was to preside proved a great attraction. When the ex-president arrived he was heartily applauded. The Hon. John W. Foster, ex-secretary of state, was also on the platform.

The Rev. John R Davis acted as chairman and introduced ex-President Harrison as "a great and good man."

General Harrison began his speech by saying that the Presbyterian church had been greatly celebrated for its power of resistance. It has stood fast for love and liberty; it had stood fast for education; it had been in the United States the pioneer of education; it had stood for the highest scholarship, and it had stood against that pseudo altitudinous philosophy that from the study of God's work, finds there is no God, and from the study of his word that he has given us no word He continued:

It has been strenuous in its opposition to this doctrine, and has stood with the stiffness of a steel beam for the faith delivered by the fathers, and it still stands for the essential doctrine of the inspired word It is not an illiberal church. No body of Christians in the world opens its arms wider or more lovingly to all who love the master. It is Catholic in its sympathy and in its co-operation with the churches. The missionary spirit is inherent in christianity, and we meet here tonight in this meeting which culminates our efforts to take counsel as Presbyterians, as to how we can advance the cause of foreign missions.

I have sometimes in missionary meetings heard speakers talk about the needs of the board. That seems to me very much like the man whose grocery bills are not paid, and who will talk about the needs of his butler. We are not here to talk about the needs of the board, but our needs—the needs of the church and the needs of the world. We are here to summon you to the duties which your church membership implies, and which implies much more when you consider the great head of the church I think I may say to you, "Hold fast the good doctrines, not the shepherd."

HOT TEMPERED OFFICERS

Order Troops to Fire Upon Unarmed People—Twenty-three Shot.

BOGOTA, Colombia, Nov. 16.—Firing at the barracks drew so great a crowd that it was difficult to move quickly, and the impatient officers ordered the troops to charge bayonets, which they did, but meeting with resistance and five shots being fired from the crowd, the troops began firing upon the people. A regular battle ensued, and the crowd being unarmed were obliged to fly, leaving 28 killed and wounded on the field. The cause of the firing in the barracks was that part of the guard had attempted to desert. Fourteen were shot.

THE STOCK MARKET RECOVERING.

Government Crop Report a Puzzler—Receipts of Wheat at Western Points Much Larger Than Last Year—Output of Pig Iron Large and Prices of Finished Product Declining.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—R G. Dun & Company's weekly review of trade says: The scare about gold exports had no real significance, and although $2,250,000 more will go out today, the stock market has been recovering. There was and is a substantial cause of difficulty, in the fact that exports have been too small to meet the greatly increased imports of merchandise. The collapse of Kaffir speculations abroad has forced many to realize on Americans held, and the impression that our government may have to borrow again also operates to our disadvantage. But there is no local disturbance of money markets

The government monthly crop report has caused, as usual, rather more uncertainty as to its interpretation than previously existed as to crops Wheat perplexes the oldest inhabitant. There is really little reason to expect a yield larger than last year's, but western receipts, 8,202,864 bushels, against 4,026,639 last year, do not mean scarcity of wheat. Prices have now declined so far that, for the first time in many months, Atlantic exports exceed those of a year ago, having been for two weeks, flour included, 3,260,384 bushels, against 3,193,131 last year The decline, nearly 1 cent, is not much, but does not mean confidence in renewed advance. Corn is scarcely lower, but without the aid of the government, all know that the supply will largely exceed all home and foreign demands

The output of pig iron Nov. 1 was 217,306 tons weekly, about 10 per cent larger than ever before. The startling fact is that the demand for products of iron and steel falls off, notwithstanding the increase in output of pig, and though only a few concerns have closed, or reduced work or wages on account of lack of orders, prices are sinking, having declined 2.7 per cent for the week, and 6.4 per cent from the highest point. Bessemer pig, billets, gray forge, bar, tank steel plates, structural angles and wire nails have all sold lower within the past week, though quotations are kept up as far as possible by associations. Minor metals are on the whole lower, though tin has stiffened a little, but lake copper sold at 11½ cents and is weak. Lead is decidedly weaker on account of foreign consumption, and is quoted at 3.17½ cents.

The woolen manufacture has to meet this year with two difficulties, the remarkable demand for clay worsteds, which has encouraged an advance of 10 per cent in price, and the heavy export of woolen goods, which have amounted for nine months to 58,456,402 pounds against 12,907,068 last year, and 30,398,465 in the same months of 1892. But sales of wool continue large for two weeks of November. 12,192,950 pounds against 12,289,600 in 1892, in spite of the fact that part of the works are closed or working only part force.

Failures for the week have been 283 in the United States against 270 last year, and 42 in Canada against 38 last year.

MONROE DOCTRINE

May Prevent England's Taking Charge of the Island of Cuba.

CITY OF MEXICO, Nov. 16.—A prominent Spaniard here, who is in close touch with the Spanish government, says that before Spain will concur in Cuban independence or permit the island to come under a United States protectorate or rule she will throw Cuba into the hands of England, conceding to England ostensible possession for a number of years until England collects the sum of money which is due her from Spain for advances made to carry on the war with Cuba.

IT WAS A SUCCESS.

THE PATRIARCHS MILITANT ENTERTAINMENT SO DECLARED.

I. O. O. F. Headquarters Were Crowded Friday Evening With an Appreciative Audience—Review of the Program Rendered During the Evening.

A large crowd assembled at the headquarters of the I. O. O. F. bodies Friday to witness the entertainment given under the auspices of Canton Marion, No. 66, Patriarchs Militant. The benefit was given to raise money for the encampment which meets here next year. The people understood that it was for a good cause and patronized the affair liberally, but it deserved every bit of patronage it received.

In the large I. O. O. F. hall a stage had been erected and everything was arranged for the comfort of the audience. There was not a thing to mar the pleasures of the entertainment.

The Patriarchs Militant quartet opened the entertainment with a number entitled "We Meet Again." They were obliged to answer to an encore.

Masters Jesse Dowler and John Haines rendered a violin duet and responded to an encore. These two youngsters well understand the handling of a violin.

A very pleasant feature of the entertainment was the Mendelssohn Ladies' quartet, composed of Mrs. J. H. Criswell, Miss Flora Kowalke, Miss Clara Kowalke and Miss Abigail Gast. This organization was down for three numbers, but the quartet was obliged to answer to encores, and each effort was met with continued storms of applause. The ladies are fully identified with the musical organizations of this city, and added to their fame by the entertainment Friday evening.

J. J. Crawley recited "Clarence's Dream," from Shakespeare, and was loudly applauded, but John J. made his hit in his German songs, which not only caused laughter but earned him an encore.

C. J. Long, the elocutionist made a hit. Mr. Long's recitation, "Asleep at the Switch," was well received, and he showed his versatality when he gave "How Ruby Played" as an encore. Mr Long was one of the best features of the entertainment.

A lullaby, "Mother Loves You So," was very pleasantly rendered by Mrs Crossen.

Prof. William Dowler rendered a selection on the piano entitled "Die Lustigen Weiber von Winsor."

The closing of the entertainment was a tableau entitled "Presentation of the Head of Goliath to King Saul by David." It was a pretty picture and was presented by the Patriarchs Militant in full uniform. There were thirteen characters represented.

A Wooden Bicycle

The Marion Bicycle company is now at work on a novel bicycle. It is the invention of Henry White. The machine is to have a wooden frame and wooden felloes, but wire spokes. It is claimed that the wood will be well seasoned and that it will wear fully as well as the pipe tubing. The machine is now in the course of construction.

The Bicycle company is also at work on a gas engine. The first one is about completed. The engine will be an improvement over anything yet manufactured. The company think that it will be a success and expect to get it on the market soon.

TOWN TOPICS

Miss Clara Louise Johnston is at present acting as substitute teacher in the public schools in the place of Miss Christian, who is disabled with sickness.

The next entertainment to be given by the Twigs will be at the home of the Misses Wallace, of Gospel Hill. The date set is the first Friday after Thanksgiving.

The customary exercises were rendered by the three High school Literary societies Friday afternoon Many visitors were present and heartily enjoyed the various exercises.

The "Hoss and Hoss" company, twenty in number, will Sunday in Marion tomorrow, stopping at Hotel Marion. The company comes here from Bellefontaine, enroute to Mansfield.

The next social session of the Elks will be in charge of the ladies. Mrs George B. Christian, Mrs J. J. Darmody and Mrs. W. G. Harding have been appointed as a committee to look after the affair.

Fifteen of the leading ladies of the city have organized the Tuesday club. The club is literary in its purposes, and will meet at the home of one of the members every Tuesday afternoon.

The Y. M. C. A. foot ball team, of this place, went to Dayton today to play the Y. M. C. A. team of that city. It is to be hoped that our boys will come back crowned with the laurels of victory.

Delaware avenue is being torn up and graded preparatory to the laying of the stone. The stone and concrete used on Prospect street which had to be taken up is being used on the street so far as it will go.

At last the cap stone of the new opera house is in place and for the first time in the city's history the words "Grand Opera House" stand out a welcome relief from "Wigwam," "City Hall" and "Skating Rink."

Miss Stella Smiley entertained the Buzz club at the home of her parents, Mr and Mrs. H. Smiley, of east Church street, at progressive pedro, Friday night. Dainty refreshments were served and a merry time had by all.

In the very near future there is a party arranged for east Center street and another for Gospel Hill. While they are not to be affairs to which the entire social world will be invited they yet will be quite elaborate and recherche affairs

The personnel of the Twilight Mandolin club, the organization which so delighted the auditors at the Elks' social Thursday evening, is as follows: Miss Hallie Haberman, Miss Miriam DeWolfe, Miss Anne Adams and Miss Rosanna Thomas.

George N. Hinds, accompanied by a double barreled shotgun, went about the city Friday evening, bidding his friends farewell. George explained that he was only going out today after rabbits but there was nothing like fixing things for accidents.

It will be a pleasure to the Marion friends of Miss M. L. T. Donavin to know that next Thursday evening, Nov. 21, she will give a grand concert at the opera house in Delaware, at which she will be assisted by the celebrated Arion quartet, of Columbus Quite a number of our young society people are making arrangements to be present.

A few more delays, such as has been caused by the contractors on the iron work, and it will hardly be possible for any entertainments to be given in the opera house during the season of 1895-6 It is now hardly probable that the structure will be finished before the first of March, and if the first of April does not find it incomplete it will be a cause for wonder.

Miss Lyda Abel very delightfully entertained a small party of friends at her home on north Prospect street last evening The "Senses Contest," the main feature of the evening, was very much enjoyed by all and resulted in Miss McClain carrying away first honors while Messrs. Beerbower and Peters triumphantly bore away the "booby." Light refreshments were served and all returned home very much pleased with the evening's entertainment

There is not a little talk at present of a fine social club to be organized in this city. As talked, the idea is to limit the membership to twenty-five, which number would be sufficient to conduct the club in a first-class manner. Bucyrus and Fostoria each possess clubs which are honors to those cities and there is no earthly reason why Marion cannot be like equipped, especially when we are so greatly superior to those cities in size.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Haberman entertained a number of their friends at progressive pedro at their home on east George street, Thursday evening. Four tables were utilized and the first prize for the ladies, a beautiful China plate, was won by Mrs Wm. Smith, the first prize for the gentlemen, a deck of cards, by Harry Barnhart. Miss Zoa King and Will Smith succeeded in securing the less coveted trophies. Delightful refreshments were served

Those present at the Lanceley lecture Thursday night, will recall the story told by the speaker, how in his boyhood he had envied the musical powers of a young friend of his and how easy it was, from his words, to imagine that he was as devoid of the power to produce harmony as a Hottentot. The force of the lecture would have been lessened in that one particular place, at least, had the truth been known in regard to Dr. Lanceley's musical ability It has been definitely stated by a citizen well versed in things musical that Dr Lanceley is an accomplished musician, being a performer of merit on either piano or pipe organ. The gentleman states that he does not speak from hearsay but from the fact that he has heard the Doctor perform.

Cars Numbered Thirteen.

A man carrying a heavy satchel chased a cross-town car half a block the other day, and by reason of a slow going truck on the track in front of it was enabled to overtake it. As he was about to step aboard his glance rested on the side of the car for a moment. With an expression of alarm on his face he turned around and trotted back to the sidewalk.

"There's another," remarked the conductor

"What's the matter with him? Wind, cars?" asked a passenger.

"No. Guess not. He probably saw the number," replied the conductor, pointing to an open as 13 painted on the woodwork. "You wouldn't believe there were so many superstitious people in New York, maybe you've been that way yourself, but I've noticed that the business of any other car on the line when it numbered 13 was about as much as a rule, but some of the men will carry anything rather than take this car. A chap closed up up yesterday, jumped on and grasped hold of the rail. I called to him, and he didn't look.

"'I'll miss my train, but I'd rather do it than ride in that hoodoo.'

"I was late as I stood, this car never had any trouble." The man was right. It went through the day without a hitch."—New York Sun

Self Torture!

That's what it amounts to, when you attempt to do washing and cleaning, now-a-days, without Pearline. And the strange part of it is, that you should be willing to suffer, when it's only for your loss and not for your gain. That needless back-breaking rub, rub, rub isn't saving you anything. THE KING OF ASHANTI.

A Monarch Who Is Unique In Many Particulars.

HIS SAVAGE SWAY IS ABSOLUTE.

He Defies Great Britain and Could Give King Solomon Pointers on Matrimony. A Plug Hat Is His Crown, an Umbrella His Royal Scepter.

Solomon in all his glory was not in it, either as a married man or a puissant potentate, with the king of Ashanti. Of all the astonishing kings of Africa or the south sea islands this dusky monarch stands pre-eminent. He has not only defied fate by marrying 3,333 wives, but he has defied the British government and hurled back her ultimatum in her face. He is now awaiting the approach of the English army and will try conclusions with John Bull, as did his predecessor, King Koth Kalkirra, in 1874. The result, of course, must be the same as it was in that memorable conflict, but the Ashantees are fierce fighters, well armed, and it is no light task that Lord Salisbury has undertaken.

Prembi, the king of Ashanti, is the absolute monarch of about 3,000,000 subjects. They live in the heart of the African forest, a few hundred miles back from the Gold Coast. The king wears a girdle of dried grass around his hips and a "plug" hat. He owns no crown, but in some way has become possessed of a silk hat, which now does duty as an emblem of sovereignty.

Another remarkable fact about this barbarous king is that he has no throne. He has, however, a solid gold stool, which does service as a throne. It takes four able bodied slaves to tug this heavy stool around.

But the greatest official emblem of royal authority is an umbrella. This curiosity has a big bamboo handle and spokes of embossed gold. On the end of each spoke is a human skull. Nobody, not even the king himself, knows the significance of this strange scepter of majesty, but it has descended to him from a long line of ancestry.

King Prembi, among other things, has exactly 3,333 wives allowed him by law. Why this liberal figure was decided upon his majesty does not know. Like the umbrella they came to him by inheritance. These helpmeets the king keeps in a vast harem which is guarded by several hundred eunuchs. A large proportion of his wives serve in menial capacities about the palace. The women folk of the common people, however, are surrounded by no such restrictions.

If any man looks at one of Prembi's 3,333 wives, that man's name is Dennis. Some of these numerous wives of the king of Ashanti are not worth looking at, it is true, but the owner of any profane eyes that even by accident happened to rest upon them would be conducted to a shady grove in the neighborhood of the town and fail to return.

His majesty lives in a big stone and native brick palace, the only structure of the kind in the kingdom. His royal highness sleeps on the floor.

The king is several times a millionaire, and it is believed that he has several barrels of gold dust and nuggets. Ashanti is rich in gold.

Prembi is a bloodthirsty monarch, and he is in the habit of making human sacrifices on a wholesale scale. Whenever it pleases him to do so, he orders a few hundred subjects to be beheaded. Besides this, during certain religious ceremonies it is customary to kill subjects. It is this practice which England wants the king to stop. And it is to put an end to these human sacrifices that the British troops will make war on the king.

When one king dies, 2,000 people are killed as a guard of honor to accompany him to the other world. As many as 10,000 are reported to have been killed on one occasion in a single day.

Upon every national festival it is also the custom for the king of Ashanti to offer human sacrifices. People are believed to be killed almost every day at Kumassi, the capital, and this kind of official murder is a regular thing.

The one thing which has always excited the horror and amazement of travelers who have penetrated this country is the Grove of Skulls, where in countless numbers the bones of victims of the king lie upon the ground with the festering remains of those who have recently been dispatched.

Here, where vultures gorged with human flesh perch upon the trees waiting for the new victims which many years have taught them to look for with certainty, is a spectacle presented the like of which is to be seen nowhere else upon earth.

This spot where executions have taken place from time immemorial, is in a small grove back of the large market place at Kumassi. The victims are brought to this place with their hands securely tied, and they are made dumb by two knives thrust crosswise through their cheeks.

The poor wretches are for a time tortured by being pinched, pricked with swords and fired upon at short range with blank cartridges. The powder from these cartridges enters the flesh, causing excruciating agony.

Then the executioners, who are fantastically dressed, seize their huge swords, and flourishing them in the air lop off the heads of the victims one after another. Then they retire from the scene drenched with blood from head to foot and leaving the bodies lying where they fall.

As soon as the executioners retire the vultures swoop down from the trees above, and the ground is soon black with them. At night the panthers come and slink away satiated before the dawn. The pathway leading to this grove has been used for many years, and it is always slippery with blood.

A CURIOUS MEETING.

A Thief and His Victim Brought Together In a Far Country.

Robert Thom, Esq., the present proprietor of the island of Canna, in the far Hebrides, tells the following story:

Mr. David R., a well known merchant in Glasgow, was several years ago traveling in Canada. On a Sunday evening, far away in the backwoods, he was interested by hearing from a humble "shanty" the words of a Scottish "paraphrase," sung to a familiar air. After a little he thought he would visit this countryman whose family worship had thus recalled to him other scenes. After chatting for awhile, the man asked where he was from.

On being told that he was from Glasgow he asked his name, and on being informed he became much excited. "I always expected some one of your family to come. My name is ——." As my friend had never heard of his name he asked for an explanation, and the man proceeded to tell him that he was the clerk who had stolen a considerable sum from the firm to which R. belonged; that he had been miserable ever since, feeling sure that at any hour he might be discovered; that he was now doing well, and that it was his intention in a short time to repay all that he had taken.

My friend had been in the West Indies at the time the theft took place, and it was not till after his return to Scotland that he learned the particulars. It is, however, somewhat disappointing to hear the statement with which he used to end the recital of the strange story, "In spite of his promise, we have never yet received any payment!"

A QUEER CAREER.

Dave English Has Seen Many Vicissitudes as Horse Thief, Evangelist and Burglar.

Dave English, who was recently sent to the penitentiary at Chester, Ills., for a term of two years, has had a remarkable career as horse thief, evangelist and burglar. His first offense had a tinge of romance in it, a girl, a horse and an irate father figuring in it. In Missouri, about 1879, Dave fell in love with a country maiden, and the affection was reciprocated. He was a good looker, a dashing sort of fellow, but a cruel parent objected and forbade the marriage, and the would be groom was not permitted to come on the premises. But one night Dave hied himself to the home of his affianced, and, in addition to carrying off the girl, a horse, belonging to the old gentleman was saddled, and, riding double, the pair proceeded, to a neighboring town and were made man and wife. Their flight was discovered but in place of following them up and giving them his blessing and the horse the father got out a warrant for Dave for horse stealing, threw him into prison and landed him in the Jefferson City penitentiary for a term of two years, his wife securing a divorce at the next term of court.

Dave English was next heard of in Jersey county, Ills., in April, 1883, when he broke into a house to get some salt and matches with which to prepare a feast from a chicken which he had purloined. He spent 11 months and one day in the penitentiary as an atonement for this offense. After leaving the prison he enlisted in the regular army, but it is said that he did not finish his term of enlistment. The story goes that when he went east with his regiment his record became known, and that, combined with general cussedness, caused him to be drummed out—dishonorably discharged.

English returned to Illinois and married again, settling on Macoupin island, in Greene county, where he spent a short time in the county jail for stealing a hog. From Greene county he again drifted into Jersey county, where, in the winter of 1889, he burglarized the house of his aunt—net proceeds of the robbery, 50 cents—and was sentenced to the penitentiary for five years. He was discharged on Christmas day, 1893.

During his last term of penal servitude Dave English professed religion and showed signs of reformation. On his return to Jersey county he began to preach, and as an evangelist his work was phenomenal. With a gifted flow of language, earnest and forcible, he drew crowds in Jersey, Greene, Pike, Calhoun—everywhere he went he drew crowds by the thousands and made converts by the hundreds, and he was a recognized rival in Christian work to Sam Jones. But he went wrong—he fell from grace. He fell in love with another man's wife. She forgot her marriage vows, he forgot his duty. They fled and eloped together in a skiff down the Mississippi.

Dave next turned up at Alton last winter, seeking a night's shelter at the police station—broke, dirty and forlorn, claiming to have been robbed of skiff, clothing, woman and everything. Having laid down Bible and hymn book, he went to burglarizing again. Aided by pals, he went through the postoffices at Grafton, Rosedale and Newhern. His arrest resulted, he peached on his pals and was let off with a light sentence of two years. He is now employed in the foundry at the prison, with leisure between his working hours to review his past and again repent of the error of his ways.

Shocked an Up to Date Novelist.

In France the sexes are very much less separated than they are here. There is a capital story current of the shock a beautiful American novelist received on her first visit to Paris. There was a knock-knock at her door in the morning about 8 o'clock. "Entrez," she called out sleepily, thinking, of course, that it was the chambermaid with her coffee and roll. Then she snoozed off again, but in less than half a minute a touch on her arm awoke her, and she saw a man in uniform towering over her. The shock woke her right out. But it was only the postman with a registered letter that required her signature.

HAIL, THANKSGIVING

THE PRESIDENT'S PROCLAMATION AND HOW IT IS WRITTEN.

Washington Issued the First Proclamation, Only General, However, Since Lincoln's Time—The Ceremony In the State Department—What the Proclamation Says.

A few days since the president issued through the press his annual Thanksgiving proclamation. The custom of issuing a national proclamation has been annual only since Lincoln's time, though George Washington issued as early as 1789 a proclamation, which has served as a model for his successors. The Revolutionary fathers believed they had particular reason for giving thanks, and they lost few opportunities of doing so. Thus in the continental congress there were resolutions passed setting aside days for acknowledging the kindness of Providence in giving victory to the Revolutionist forces. The chaplains of congress were the prime movers in this. But the thanks of the nation were given rather grudgingly afterward, and it was due to a Boston woman's efforts that President Lincoln made a habit of proclaiming a special day for giving thanks.

Since Lincoln's time the presidents have all issued Thanksgiving proclamations early in November. These proclamations are composed usually by the presidents themselves, and in most instances they have been written with the president's own hand. From the White House they have gone to the state department, where they have been copied with exactness on that office's blue paper. The proclamation is never typewritten. The typewriter is used in all the departments freely, with the exception of the state department. Here Secretary Gresham used it for his correspondence, but before him it was not used even for the secretary's letters. No official document emanating from the state department is ever written on the typewriter. It is invariably engrossed in flowing script on the department's blue bond paper.

When the proclamation has been engrossed, it is sent to the office of the clerk of pardons and commissions. He has the custody of the great seal. No impression of this can be made without a special warrant signed by the president of the United States himself. This seal is kept constantly under lock and key, except when it is in use for the attesting of pardons, commissions or proclamations of the president. It is an elaborate affair, which cost $1,000, and the making of the impression is accomplished with much ceremony and not a little labor.

When the seal has been affixed the document is copied by clerks, and copies are sent to the governors of all the states. It is given to the press at the same time, and the press associations telegraph it to all the quarters of the country for publication. It finds its way into a good many thousand newspapers, and probably is read by ten or fifteen millions of the people of the United States.

The first Thanksgiving proclamation, that of President Washington, was issued in New York Oct. 3, 1789. President Washington, it will be seen, took time by the forelock. There was no telegraph in his day to transmit the proclamation to the uttermost parts of the United States. It had to reach the interior by stage and carrier, and no doubt many of the people who had some reason to give thanks did not hear of this appointment of Nov. 26 for that purpose until November was long past. The original of the Washington proclamation is in the hands of the Rev. J. W. Wellman, who inherited it remotely from his great grandfather, William Ripley of Cornish, N. H. It was much like the proclamation of today. It began with the formal, "By the President of the United States of America—A Proclamation."

In the first paragraph the president says that "whereas it is the duty of all nations to acknowledge the providence of Almighty God, to obey his will, to be grateful for his benefits and humbly to implore his protection and favor, and whereas both houses of congress have, by their joint committee, requested me 'to recommend to the people of the United States a day of public thanksgiving and prayer, to be observed by acknowledging with grateful hearts the many signal favors of Almighty God, especially by affording them an opportunity peaceably to establish a form of government for their safety and happiness,' now, therefore, he recommends and assigns Thursday, the 26th day of November, as a day of thanksgiving."—New York Sun.

Governor McKinley Quits Smoking.

Abner McKinley, a New York attorney and brother of Governor William McKinley of Ohio, was recently in Pittsburg on legal business. He said: "The greatest piece of news I know of is not in the line of politics. My brother, Governor McKinley, has actually quit smoking. His fondness for the weed was proverbial, wherever he is known, but he thinks the habit has had a bad effect on his nervous system, and on that account gave it up, although the effort was almost superhuman. He experiences pangs yet when he meets a man with a good cigar or even an indifferent one."—Pittsburg Times.

An Engineer's Big Fee.

Professor Fuertes of the College of Civil Engineering of Cornell university is reported to have received the largest fee perhaps ever paid to an engineer—$120,000. This is for services in planning a system of sanitation for the city of Santos, Brazil. Santos is the output city for Brazilian coffee, and the death rate from yellow fever and similar causes has averaged 205 to 1,000 a year. The entire city is to be practically torn down and rebuilt on sanitary principles at a cost to the Brazilian government of some $4,000,000.—Watertown Standard.

Wonderful Help.

It is hard to remember unrelated, unassociated facts. The science of mnemonics, if there is such a science, consists largely in training the mind to hang things upon their own pegs, as it were—in other words, to associate one thing with another. But such processes of relation should be simple and natural.

"In what year was Abraham Lincoln born?" asked a public school teacher, who had been taking a course of mnemonics under a specialist.

"I don't remember," answered the pupil.

"Don't remember! Well, you must go about it in the right way. How many muses were there?"

"Nine."

"Of course. Now double that number."

"Eighteen."

"Now multiply by 100."

"Eighteen hundred."

"Very good! Hold on to that. How many graces were there?"

"Three."

"Precisely. Multiply that by itself."

"Nine."

"Just so! Now add that to the result you just obtained, and what have you?"

"Eighteen hundred and nine."

"Well, I see, there you have it. Lincoln was born in 1809. Everything depends upon going to work in a proper manner. The memory needs a bit of help, that's all."—Youth's Companion.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

A Winged General of the Seas.

One of the most extraordinary specimens of the fish family is the manta or great general of the south seas, an animal of the whale species, which lives its home in the Indian ocean. A full grown manta is upward of 25 feet in length, pure black in color and has eyes as large as a saucer. Besides the above characteristic features, which may be said to be whalelike, with the exception of the eyes, the manta has two immense fins, which resemble those of the elephant, both in size and color, and two queer winglike membranes extending along each side from the side fins almost to the tail. The old mans have a curious habit of marshaling their kind to do battle with the whales and the sharks, and old mariners say that they maneuver with so much intelligence and sagacity that they are known to all the islanders by names which signify winged generals, winged warriors or winged chiefs of the seas. The National museum at Berlin has a fine mounted specimen of this queer warlike fish.—St. Louis Republic.

Mother Gray's Sweet Worm Powders

were successfully used in treating children's complaints by Mother Gray, for years a nurse in the Children's Home at New York. They will certainly remove all kinds of worms, and when a child is feverish, with bad stomach and irregular bowels, they always cure. Pleasant and harmless as milk. Mothers should give Mother Gray's Sweet Worm Powders to their children occasionally through the year. They prevent worms forming.

Hair Covers.

Outsiders marveling the large quantities of hair that is imported into China would marvel more the houses are all painted with that durable and particularly inartificial color. Such is not the case, and the mystery is duly explained by the practice of painting canvas covered hams and bacon with the pigment, which has been found to be the best protection for cured meats.—Chicago Tribune.

About Lightning Strokes.

Certain facts about lightning strokes, the result of years of experiment by the United States weather bureau, have recently been tabulated. Thunderstorms reach their maximum in June and July, though reported in every month except January, the region of winter thunderstorms centering about Louisiana. Forty such storms are the maximum average for any such section. The average loss of life from lightning in the United States is 24 persons; of loss of property, over $1,500,000. People living in cities and thickly built towns run little danger, the risk in the country or suburbs being five times as great. For the same reason the center of a grove or forest is much safer than its edges or isolated trees, the dense growth acting to distribute the current.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The talk of Senator Sherman resigning is being regarded as a political joke.

Three of the four presidential candidates most talked about were born in Ohio. They are McKinley, Allison and Harrison.

Senator Harris says that without a 16 to 1 free silver plank Democrats will lose in 1896. Come to think of it that's about the ratio of Republicans to Democrats, as indicated by the late election returns.

With his enemies and friends both wanting him renominated, President Cleveland's third-term boom appears to be doing quite nicely. A great deal depends on what Mr. Cleveland thinks about it.

Official returns from all Kentucky counties give Bradley, the governor-elect, a plurality of 8171 votes. All republican candidates on the state ticket are elected, although all of them run behind Bradley.

The proposition to allow Governor McKinley to select his own delegates to the national convention is not meeting with general approval among Republicans. And there is some doubt of Mr. McKinley favoring such a move.

As near as can be guessed from opinions already expressed, about all the people expect of the next Ohio legislature is that it will meet, elect Foraker to the U. S. senate, transact what business it has before it in a quick and devilish manner, then adjourn and stay adjourned.

It is with unfeigned pleasure that we note our neighbor Galion is happy over the recent turn of events in matters pertaining to her railroad interests. The Galion Sun-Review admits that there have been misgivings in regard to her future railroad greatness, in testimony whereof is the following from that paper:

"There has been some apprehension that when the Erie railroad was sold there would be a change in the management of the road and that possibly the new management would be antagonistic to Galion's interest. This fear may now be dispelled for the road will remain in charge of the old management and these officers are known to be favorable to Galion."

But should any unlooked-for event turn up to indicate that these officers are not unduly favorable to Galion, if such a thing might happen, we say, we fear that the dear old girl would have to be watched to prevent her from committing suicide.

Piano Playing and Nervousness.

Not a few long suffering people, who have been driven to the verge of distraction by the noise created by neighbors under these circumstances conditions, will be inclined to give a vote of hearty thanks to a member of the Academy of Medicine, who has written a paper in which he claims the nervousness from which girls and young women so frequently suffer in the days to the "abuse of the piano" when they were mere children. This gentleman accordingly expresses the opinion that girls should not begin their acquaintance with the piano until they have attained the age of 15 or 16, and then only if they have a pronounced taste for it and a "tolerst constitution" as well.—London Telegraph.

WANTS A RECEIVER.

JOHN HUFFMAN BY JACOB HUFFMAN HIS NEXT FRIEND

Seeks the Collection of a Judgment Against the Nypano, the Appointment of a Receiver and $55,500,000 Mortgage Liens Marshaled—Other Court News.

The First Presbyterian church, by its attorneys, J. F. McNeal and Sons today filed in the court of common pleas an answer to the cross petition of Wm. Caldwell in the case of The Cleveland Stone company against Driver Bros. and others.

For answer this defendant says it is the same corporation named as defendant herein as the First Presbyterian congregation of Marion, Ohio, its name having been changed in accordance with law since this action was commenced.

That it has succeeded to all rights, privileges and obligations of the First Presbyterian congregation, the sole change being the name, and that it is now duly incorporated under the laws of Ohio.

Admitting that defendant, William Caldwell, was principal contractor for the construction of said church described in plaintiff's petition herein, that he has constructed said church and that the same has been accepted by the supervising architect and that the building has been used and occupied since the completion of said contract, it further admits that it and the said defendant have agreed upon the amount still unpaid on said contract and that said amount is correctly stated in the said answer and cross-petition of said Wm. Caldwell.

This defendant says that the sum of $1407 70 is still due to said Caldwell, but says that the same has been withheld because of the taking of mechanic's liens by other defendants herein and the same is withheld by agreement with the said Caldwell until the validity of said liens and the liability of this defendant therefor shall be settled by this court, and it says it is not liable for nor should it be required to pay interest upon the balance so agreed to be due and payable to said Caldwell.

This defendant says that it is holding said money solely because of the above stipulation and of the special agreement of said defendant Caldwell, that the same should be held by this defendant until the adjudication of the claim and alleged mechanic's lien aforesaid.

Wherefore this defendant prays that the rights and claims of all the parties to this suit to the money remaining in it possession may be determined, all liens, if any, be declared and their priority fixed, that this defendant be directed as to the payment of said moneys and its building cleared of all liens.

The Cleveland Stone company, J. C. Markert and Leffler & Bland, by their attorneys, J. F. McNeal & Sons, have filed replies in the court of common pleas in the case of the Cleveland Stone company against Driver Bros. and others, to the separate answers of Wm. Caldwell, all of them being in the form of general denials.

In the court of common pleas, this morning, Scofield, Durfee & Scofield, as attorneys for John Huffman, an infant, by Jacob Huffman, his next friend, filed a petition against the New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio railroad company, the New York, Lake Erie and Western Railroad company, and John R. McCullough and E. B. Thomas, its receivers, the Farmers' Loan and Trust company, Herman Dressler and William Fell Niswanger.

The plaintiff, after setting up the incorporation of the N. Y., P. and O. under the laws of Ohio and the incorporation of the N. Y., L. E. and W. R. R. company and the Farmers' Loan and Trust company under the laws of New York, says:

That at the February term, 1891, of this court, to-wit, March 30, 1894, said plaintiff recovered a judgment against the said defendant, the N. Y., P. and O., by the consideration of said court in the sum of $5500, with interest at 6 per cent. per annum, from March 30, 1891, with costs taxed at $211.96.

That on the 3d day of September, 1895, an execution was duly issued on said judgment to the sheriff of Cuyahoga county, Ohio, that being the residence and principal place of business of said defendant, the N. Y., P. and O. R. R. company, and said execution was returned wholly unsatisfied.

Plaintiff further says that the N. Y., P. and O. has no real or personal property subject to levy on execution sufficient to satisfy said judgment; that it has an equitable interest as mortgagor in the railroad and its appurtenances, franchises and right of way of said company, from Salamanca in the state of New York to Dayton in the state of Ohio, and running through said Marion county.

That it has an interest in a certain contract or lease as lessor of said railroad and right of way, recorded in said Marion county, of said company with the New York, Lake Erie and Western Railroad company and its receivers and certain persons claiming under them, to the the plaintiff unknown, and in certain rentals due and to become due on said contract and lease and other rights, credits and property in the hands of diverse persons to plaintiff unknown, and said defendant refuses to apply any of its property in satisfaction of said plaintiff's judgment.

That defendant, The N. Y., P. and O. R. R. company, is insolvent or in imminent danger of insolvency, and that unless a receiver is appointed by the court to sequester, preserve and apply said property to the satisfaction of said judgment the same will be dissipated and lost and said judgment will remain unsatisfied and wholly uncollectible.

That said defendant, The Farmers' Loan and Trust company, claims some interest in said property by reason of two mortgages, to-wit: $8,000 000 and $3,500,000 respectively and said Herman Dressler and William Fell Niswanger claim some interest in said property by reason of a certain mortgage to them for about $14,000 000, and the N. Y., L. E. and W., by its receivers, claim some interest in said property by a certain lease.

That said liens should be marshaled, their priorities determined and said property sold and out of the proceeds thereof said judgment ought to be paid.

Wherefore, plaintiff prays that the N. Y., L. E. and W. R. R. company, its receiver, the Farmers' Loan and Trust company, said Herman Dressler and William Fell Niswanger may be made parties herein and required to set up their interests, that a receiver may be appointed by the court to collect said rentals and to apply the property of the said defendant, the N. Y., P. and O., to the satisfaction of said judgment, interest and costs, and that said liens may be marshaled, their priorities fixed and determined and said property be sold and out of the proceeds thereof said judgment by paid with interest and costs.

In the case of Eugenia Jones against Phineas Jones for divorce, in the court of common pleas, Judge Norris granted a divorce to the plaintiff on the grounds of cruelty and gross neglect of duty, and gave her the custody of the children of said marriage, one of whom labors under the name of Grover Cleveland Jones.

In the court of common pleas, this morning, in the case of Hain, executor against Joseph Cope and others, a decree of foreclosure was granted on the petition and cross-petition and an order of sale issued.

In the case of D. R. Crissinger, guardian of Caroline Keil, an imbecile, against John Cull and others, in the court of common pleas, Amos H. Kling by his attorneys, J. F. McNeal & Sons, filed his answer, setting up two $50 notes with some credits thereon, secured by mortgage on lot 1099 in Martin Miller's addition to Marion, asks the priority of liens may be determined the premises sold and his claim paid out of the proceeds.

In the court of common pleas today, leave was granted the plaintiff in the case of John Short against John Cunningham and others, to file an amended petition, instanter.

The indictments against Michael Tonguet and Frank Grubb found by the grand jury at its last sitting for burning a dwelling house with intent to prejudice insurer, heretofore held subrosa, were made public today. There were three indictments found: one against Tonguet, one against Grubb and the third against both Tonguet and Grubb. Both Tonguet and Grubb came into court and entered into bond in the sum of $500 each to answer to the last indictment.

Lot 1099 in Martin Miller's addition to Marion was sold at sheriff's sale, today, to James Williams under an order of sale from the court of common pleas in the case of Crissinger, guardian, against Cull and others.

L. M. Emerson, by her attorneys, J. F. McNeal & Sons, today filed a petition in the court of common pleas against S. W. Russell, Mary M. Russell and W. D. Drake, in which she asks for judgment on a note for $100 with interest at 8 per cent. from May 22, 1891, given by the defendants to G. T. Emerson and by him assigned to this plaintiff.

HERE IS ANOTHER

MARION IS TO HAVE ANOTHER WHOLESALE GROCERY.

Nathan Metzger and A. C. Court Are at the Head of the New Stock Company That Will Establish It—Capital Stock $50,000.

Marion is to have a new wholesale grocery house, back of which will be an incorporated company composed of wholly Marion interests and Marion men.

The name of the new incorporation is not yet announced, is possibly not determined, but at the head are Nathan Metzger and A. C. Court, who are the principal stockholders, both experienced grocers and successful Marion merchants. Several smaller stockholders will complete the list, and nearly the desired sum is already subscribed.

It is planned to locate the new wholesale grocery in the Leffler block, on south Main street, where Mr. Court now has his retail store. He will retire from the retail trade. The Leffler block will be raised to three stories in height and extended in the rear to the alley, and be perfectly arranged and equipped for carrying and handling a large stock. These are the plans in mind, and will more than likely be carried out.

The advantages of Marion as a wholesale Center are very marked and well known. The shipping facilities afford special advantages. The success of the new company can almost be written with a certainty, in advance.

He Was Not a Success.

He jumped out on me from a door way on Park place one rainy night at midnight, when the street was deserted, and, seizing my arm, he hissed:

"Ha, ha, I am the Dick Turpin of New York!"

"So you are Mr Turpin, eh?" I asked as I saw that he was a tramp about 40 years old and didn't look a bit tough.

"I am Dick Turpin, the highwayman!" he answered.

"Never heard of you before. What is your special line, Richard:"

"I want money!"

"There's no specialty about that. Why all this song and dance?"

"I must have money!"

"Oh, that's it? You are a desperate man. If you can't get money any other way, you mean to knock some one over? You are not much of a brigand, Richard, but I believe in encouraging brigands as far as my means will permit. Here's a nickel for you, bold, bad man."

"Thanks, sir!" he replied as he took the coin.

"And you could have had it without jumping at me. In fact, if you had struck me in the usual fashion I think I should have made it a dime."

"You would?"

"I think so. Better go out of the Dick Turpin business. You can't make it pay."

"Have I lost a nickel, sir?"

"You have."

"And will it be the same with others?"

"It will probably be worse. The next man may knock your head off. Good night, Mr. Turpin! If you were going my way, I'd offer you half my umbrella. Better stick to the old lay."

"Yes, sir: I will, sir, for I see that I'm not a success at this when I lose half the profits to begin with. Good night, sir, and my name is Hopkins, and Dick Turpin kin go to Texas, sir!"—Detroit Free Press.

"Restaurant men like the new woman," said one of them. "She eats lots more than the other kind. The way the typewriters and stenographers down town have changed their way of feeding in the last ten years is one of the signs of the times. It used to be a cup of tea and a piece of cake or pie for lunch. Now see the beef and ham and hot stews they get away with. And they show the change in their looks too. They're not breaking down, as they used to do."—Chicago Tribune.

POET LAUREATE.

The Bookman Announces That Alfred Austin Has Been Appointed.

The November number of the London Bookman states that it learns on reliable authority that Alfred Austin has been appointed poet laureate of England.

ALFRED AUSTIN.

Alfred Austin, poet, critic and journalist, was born near Leeds, May 30, 1835. He took his degree at the University of London in 1853, and in 1857 he was called to the bar of the Inner Temple. At the age of 18 he had published a poem anonymously, called "Randolph." His first acknowledged volume of verse, "The Season—A Satire," appeared in 1861. Since then he has published many poetical productions and three novels. In 1863, in conjunction with Mr. W. J. Courthope, he founded The National Review. The work which last brought him into prominence was a prose work entitled "The Garden That I Love."

But it was the following poem that has undoubtedly led to the appointment of Austin as laureate, and that it was a strictly personal "royal" appointment will scarcely be denied after reading the verses. There is something like hollow mockery of death, awful flouting at humanity itself, in the assumed "love" talk and "mourning" when one recalls how speedily the funeral baked meats furnished coldly forth an almost unnatural wedding feast:

ALBERT VICTOR,
Duke of Clarence and Avondale, b. Jan. 8, 1864, d. Jan. 14, 1892.

* * * * * * *

But love, the boon of lord and clown,
Love had he made his own,
Love, jeweled beyond any crown,
Loftier than any throne.
He found a maiden fond and fair,
Who, trembling on his heart, wept her glad weakness there.

Alas for her, the graced, the good,
Forever doomed to wear
The mockery of widowhood
About her maiden hair.
Scarce had she time to reach and clasp
The gifts of love but they were ashes in her grasp!

Oh, if she could exchange her lot,
And now were free to choose
With one who, in some whitewashed cot,
Over her baby coos
And find the humblest hearth that burns,

NATURAL ICEBOX.

Remarkable Discovery In a Hill Near Ste. Genevieve.

About 15 miles west of Red Bud, Ills., and the same distance north of Ste. Genevieve, Mo., on the banks of the Mississippi river, is a natural curiosity, being no less than a refrigerator formed by some unexplained law of nature.

A short time ago Farmer Wallace, on whose land this was seen, dug a cellar or grotto in the shaley hillside, where the rocks are thin and brittle, in order to get a storage place for milk and other edibles. After digging back a few feet, he was surprised to find layers of ice between the layers of rocks, and as it was cool inside, and it promised to be more than he expected in the way of a refrigerator, he finished it up by putting in a door.

He finds by trial that everything placed inside, such as meats, milk, fruits or other perishable articles, keeps perfectly for any length of time. During the hottest weather last summer milk stored in this cellar would make the teeth ache to drink it. Mr. G. V. Kettler of Red Bud says it is a wonder, and not at all like a common cellar, but a veritable icebox, made so by the natural ice formed inside, how it is not known.—St Louis Republic.

An Apple Tree In Blossom.

An apple tree in blossom at the end of October was one of the curious sights presented to an observer yesterday morning during a stroll about the quiet streets of Bath Beach, Long Island. An immense cluster nodded from the topmost twig and gayly bade defiance to the approaching storm. The tree stands in the yard of the residence of R. T. Mitchell on Bay Eleventh street, close to the shore. Mr. Mitchell, a hotel keeper on Bath avenue, planted the tree in the fall of 1894. It bore an excellent crop this year, but the ravages of worms robbed it of its beauty until, to Mitchell's surprise last month, the sturdy youngster came out again in full blossom.—New York Sun.

The Passing of the Pilotboat.

The substitution of steamers for the beautiful little vessels which New York pilots have always used will doubtless increase the efficiency of the service, and therefore cannot be criticised. None the less is the change one that is to be sorrowfully contemplated as another of the many which have robbed the sea of so much poetry, and which have already made the old fashioned sailor and his virtues almost things of the past. The pilotboats were perfect instruments for the display of seafaring skill and courage; the new steamers will certainly be as ugly as they are useful, and the men on board them will follow a trade, not an art.—New York Times.

Peary to Settle Down.

Explorer Lieutenant R. E. Peary of the United States navy has been assigned for duty as a civil engineer in the department of yards and docks in the Brooklyn navy yard. His fellow officers at the yard stated that Lieutenant Peary had given up all thought of reaching the north pole and would settle down to routine work in the navy department.

Lieutenant Peary obtained leave of absence from the navy department and was engaged by the Philadelphia Historical society to take charge of its two expeditions in the north, the last of which terminated a month ago.—New York World.

MINTING GOLD COINS.

A CONSTANT STRUGGLE TO KEEP UP WITH THE DEMAND.

Active Operations of the Philadelphia Mint—The Closing of the New Orleans Mint — Coinage of Fractional Silver, Dimes and Nickels Not Being Coined.

The turning out of bright gold coins, in eagles and double eagles, is going on at the Philadelphia mint these days as rapidly as other necessary coinage will permit. The government found itself in close quarters last winter, not only by the reduction of the net gold reserve in coin and bullion, but by the absolute exhaustion of gold coin which legitimately belonged to the treasury. Coin was held against gold certificates, but constituted a trust fund which the government had no right to touch. It was borrowed without consulting the owners, and greenbacks and Sherman notes were thereby redeemed in coin which could otherwise have been redeemed only in bullion.

Secretary Carlisle determined not to be caught in this way again, and large quantities of bullion were transferred to the Philadelphia mint for coinage as soon as the crisis was over. Work is now going on to the extent of $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 a month, and if there had been no withdrawals of coin the treasury would be many millions stronger in this respect than in the spring.

A net increase of coin can only be shown when the work at the mints is more rapid than the withdrawal of coin at the subtreasuries, so that the bullion fund still stands at $55,395,800, and the coin which belongs to the government is less than $38,000,000.

This is a better showing by $2,000,000 than on Oct. 1 and will be improved by the end of the year, when gold will [illegible] again likely to become heavy.

The government is constantly getting gold, but it is largely in the form of bullion fresh from the mines, which is deposited at the mints and assay offices. The result is a constant struggle by the mint officials to keep pace with the withdrawals of gold coin. Gold coinage is executed at San Francisco to the amount of about $20,000,000 per year, but the gold comes entirely from western mints and assay offices, and none is sent there from the east.

The recent closing of the New Orleans mint was misrepresented by one of the press associations as an important event connected with the coinage of standard silver dollars. This coinage was substantially suspended several months ago, and the closing of the mint was simply due to the exhaustion of the available appropriation which has been made for several years by congress for the loss in recoining worn pieces of subsidiary silver. The subsidiary silver accumulated for several years in the treasury and could not be recoined without authority of law, because the face value of the pieces could not be reproduced from the worn coins for the amounts recoined. This recoinage has now progressed so far that the number of badly worn pieces is small, but the public has been so taken with the new designs that it is constantly demanding them in exchange for the old pieces, even where the latter have been little used.

The fractional silver now in the treasury is about $13,500,000, but only a small proportion of this is in worn coins. A part of the daily payments must necessarily be in fractional silver, and it would probably require a working balance of $7,000,000 to $8,000,000 to cover this amount. One or two more appropriations by congress will probably clean up the excess of worn coins and reduce future requirements to a small allowance to cover the average annual wear.

The treasury is not now coining any silver dimes, for an abundant supply for years to come was turned out during the craze for dime savings banks, which absorbed the little silver pieces as rapidly and completely as a rat hole. The termination of the craze for banks threw the dimes back into circulation, and they have become somewhat of a drug upon the market.

Nickels are also in excess of demands, and none is coined from new bullion. Such nickels as drift into the treasury in very bad condition or of ancient design are sent to Philadelphia and recoined, but they form but a small amount per month.

Most of the subsidiary silver coinage is now carried on at Philadelphia, but the traces of silver found in gold bullion at San Francisco are permitted to be coined there.

There is no pressing necessity for the coinage of standard silver dollars at present for the redemption of Sherman notes, although these redemptions have reached nearly $15,000,000 in standard silver dollars during the past two years. The present supply will meet the demands of this year, but further coinage may be required next summer or autumn to supply the usual demand for paying the pickers of cotton and other crops.

There is a considerable demand for pennies, and they are being turned out at Philadelphia in large numbers.—Boston Herald.

How Electricity Vitalizes Trade.

A single American copper mine has already produced 74,000,000 pounds of copper this year, and it is expected that its total output for the year will reach 95,000,000 pounds. Its net profits this year are put at $2,986,600. The [illegible] erated returns on a company's [illegible] investment are due primarily to the great demand for copper caused by the increasing use of electricity.—New York World.

THIS, THAT AND THE OTHER.

The number of quails in the country could not be estimated from the stories of the hunters. On last Tuesday a scribe asked a trio of gentlemen if quails were plentiful. He was told that they were not. The hunters said that there were but few and they kept to the brush pretty well. These hunters had been out and only bagged three. In a few minutes after that he met a quartet of hunters who had met with better luck. They had killed fifteen. They reported that quails were quite plentiful, and that if they had had a better dog they could have shot twice as many.

The city wood pile is causing much comment over the country, and even the tramps ask about it when they come to town. The tramps have all heard of it, and don't seem to care to fight shy of it. As yet there has not been one "nigger" in the wood pile.

A CALIFORNIA TRAGEDY

The Murder of Alexander P. Crittenden by Laura D. Fair.

IT STARTLED THE COUNTRY IN 1870

The Woman Was Four Times Married, and Crittenden Had Been Her Best Friend. Her Romantic Career In the Mining Camps of Nevada.

[Copyright, 1895, by American Press Association.]

Ex-Chief of Police Byrnes of New York, who knows human nature a great deal better than he does the English language, said on one occasion:

"I think the best woman is a little bit better than the best man, but the worst woman is so much worse than the worst man as to more than even things up on the side against her."

Laura D. Fair was not an angel, though, in reading over the speeches made in her defense, one is forced to the conclusion that her lawyers believed her to be one of the purest and best women since the days of Herod, or else they were consciously aware of the fact that they were uttering the greatest falsehoods ever heard by human ears since the days of Ananias.

Mrs. Fair's family were people of some intelligence, but her parents were evidently not Christians, for they had no family Bible and they kept no record of their own marriage or of the births of their children, but so far as Mrs. Fair could learn from her mother—her father had been long dead—she was, in 1870, 35 years of age. Mrs. Fair was born, so she believed, in California. In her youth she had a bright mind, and even in middle age had a prepossessing personality. She was of medium height, with yellow hair, blue eyes, an oval face, a protruding under lip and a constant expression of self consciousness, if not of vanity. She matured very early, and at the age of 16 married a man named Stone. She lived with her first husband about four months, when he died in a way that was considered mysterious at that time, but life and death in California in those days were not given the importance they have at this time.

The beautiful young widow had not worn mourning garb more than five months when she became engaged to a man named Gray and married him within a week. Her second marriage was even briefer than her first, for Gray, for some reason that was never explained, ran away and was never heard of again.

Before this remarkable woman was 1 years of ago she married W. D. Fair, a handsome young lawyer of San Francisco. Mr. Fair was well connected, had decided ability, and all who knew him believed that he had a future before him. He had been married just a year, and his daughter was less than a month old, when, to the surprise of all his friends, he committed suicide in San Francisco.

Twenty years of age, young, handsome and remarkably intelligent, considering her want of education, Mrs. Fair was thrown on her own resources, having her infant daughter and her mother, then an invalid woman of 75, to care for. For a time she tried to make a living by teaching music, but lacking the technical training, though she sang and played fairly well for an amateur, she did not succeed.

Like too many women under the same circumstances, Mrs. Fair believed she would succeed on the stage, for then as now a fine figure and a romantic history were considered the first requisites for histrionic success.

While Mrs. Fair was playing in variety houses along the Pacific slope news of the great silver discoveries in Nevada reached San Francisco. She had saved up a little money, and, with her manager, to whom it is said she was engaged to be married, she made up her mind to go to Virginia City, the center of the silver field, and start a boarding house.

Mrs. Fair with her mother and child and her manager, now a partner, went to Nevada and started a boarding house. This was near the close of the civil war when the feeling was even stronger in the far western states than in the east. Mrs. Fair's partner was a Union man, and on the Fourth of July, 1864, when the downfall of the Confederacy seemed inevitable, he sought to show his patriotism by hoisting the American flag over the boarding house. When Mrs. Fair discovered what he had done she became furious. She denounced her partner in language at once vigorous and free and rushing into the room pulled down the flag and threw it into the street. Her partner expostulated, but she swore and shot him.

The wounded man recovered, but the fatal affair was a strong topic of comment in Virginia City for some time, and the high code of honor of the women of that day would have prompted them to ostracize the woman, but in that wide-open community she was arrested and placed in prison.

At this time one of the best known criminal lawyers on the Pacific coast was Alexander P. Crittenden. Mr. Crittenden was quite as remarkable in his way as was Mrs. Fair. He was a native of Kentucky, was a graduate of Kentucky University, had served in the United States senate and was a member of the Cabinet of President Buchanan. Alexander P. Crittenden was one of a very remarkable family. Two of his cousins, sons of Senator Crittenden, were generals during the civil war, one fighting on the side of the Union and the other, equally distinguished, fighting on the side of the south. Through his uncle's influence Alexander P. Crittenden was appointed to West Point, where he was graduated in the same class with General W. T. Sherman and General Beauregard.

Crittenden served in the United States army for some time, but in 1849 resigned, studied law and went to California when the gold fever was at its height.

A man of fine personal appearance, good education, great force of character and undoubted ability, Alexander P. Crittenden, who made his home in San Francisco at once took a leading position at the bar of his adopted state. About 1860 he married a woman of good family and great personal attractiveness and refinement, by whom he had two children, a son and a girl. Mr. Crittenden was devoted to the great Nevada silver mines, and, being in Virginia City at the time Mrs. Fair met her party, he was selected to defend her, and after a visit to the prisoner he, with characteristic gallantry, agreed to do so.

Owing to Mr. Crittenden's great ability and devotion rather than to the merits of the case he succeeded in having Mrs. Fair declared not guilty.

The case kept him in Virginia City much longer than his original business required and too long as it proved for his own best interests. He became strongly attracted to his fair client, and through his persuasion, at last it is believed, Mrs. Fair came to San Francisco with her mother and child. The attachment formed in Nevada grew stronger and stronger in California, until at last his friends, with the woman's share a matter of notoriety, and his best friends would no longer continue the connection.

Mr. Crittenden seems to have been early aware of her husband's fondness for the women and with great patience and admirable common sense she tried, but unsuccessfully, to wean him from her.

For six years this liaison continued and the correspondence, subsequently brought to light, showed that Mr. Crittenden had become Mrs. Fair's slave and had spent thousands of dollars every year to meet her regular expenses and to gratify her more extravagant whims.

In 1870 Mr. Crittenden was a man 56 years of age. His oldest son, Parker, was a youth of 20 and his daughter a beautiful girl of 16. In the summer of that year he had sent his family on to the east to visit relatives, and with the additional purpose in mind of breaking off during their absence all connection with Mrs. Fair.

About a year before this time Mr. Fair, who had no position in society, and who was well known to the San Francisco "Lower Ten," had, through the advice of Mr. Crittenden, who was eager to be rid of her, married a man named Snyder. This marriage lasted just a month. Snyder left his wife, and nine weeks from the date of their marriage she was again divorced.

This was the condition of affairs on the afternoon of Nov. 3, 1870. At that time Mr. Crittenden went across the bay from San Francisco to Oakland on the regular ferry to meet his family, who he knew would come on the train due at that time.

He met his family and took a seat between his wife and daughter on the upper deck of the boat El Capitan. The ferry boat had gone about 100 yards from Oakland in the direction of San Francisco, when a woman, heavily veiled and holding a pistol in her right hand, suddenly appeared before Crittenden and called out:

"You have ruined me and my child and must die!"

She fired one shot, which struck her victim near the heart. He would have fallen to the floor had he not been caught and supported by his wife.

Mrs. Fair turned and ran to the lower deck, where she mingled among the passengers. Parker Crittenden, the murdered man's son, dashed after the woman, and, thinking on the vessel the captain of the harbor police, he had her arrested.

Mr. Crittenden was taken to his home, and on the morning of the third day after the shooting he died.

Mrs. Fair was indicted and her trial began on the 27th of March, 1871. Judge Dwinelle presided. Lawyers Cook and Gould appeared for the defense and District Attorney Harry Byrnes for the prosecution.

Every force sought to prove that Mrs. Fair was the victim of emotional insanity, but without success. The defense was masterly and it was thought that the prosecution could have made a case stronger, but it was efficient. After a trial lasting for three days during which time the jury was kept together in the Occidental hotel Mrs. Fair was declared guilty of murder in the second degree.

Mrs. Fair, setting up a claim to improved condition, applied for a divorce on the ground of extreme cruelty. Afterward Attorney

A Strange Coincidence.

Two incidents in connection with the strange events in the life of Mrs. Fair are pointed out by those who knew her. The other day at St. Louis, John Perrault, a cripple who has legs were cut off in the mines went to the City hospital to be relieved of a stone remaining from the operation. It developed that Perrault was one of the men who had been in the brigade of a dance club in Leopard Mines and fell in the volleys which came in their way. Mrs. Fair subsequently at Leadville married the man who had cut off Perrault's legs in order to further injure her enemy—the third legal fight—while she was making radical efforts to reform.

A CENTENARIAN COUNTERFEITER.

"Grandpop" Norris Labors Under Difficulties, but Gets to Prison Just the Same.

One of the most remarkable counterfeiters ever convicted in this country was sentenced a short time ago by the United States court in session at Birmingham, Ala., to hard labor for a year and a day in the penitentiary. This Nestor of "makers of the queer" is William Norris, and he comes from far up in the mountains of De Kalb county, Ala., near the little country village of Tucker. He is within three months of being 100 years old and has a number of great-great grandchildren, besides great grandchildren and grandchildren by the hundreds.

He has been for years one of the most successful counterfeiters with whom the secret service officers in Alabama have ever had to deal.

Grandpop Norris, as his fellow prisoners call him, is a mechanical genius. His eyesight is practically gone. In fact, he is entirely blind in one eye. Yet by means of his sense of touch he can, with the roughest sort of tools, turn out the most delicate of instruments. The coin molds which he was convicted of having made are marvels of skill and accuracy. Up in his mountain home he has operated a distillery surreptitiously, of course, but in a way the revenue officers found hard to detect. He utilized a washtub for a still. Its capacity was not as great as the old style affair, but it was vastly safer and more convenient to handle. When the revenue men came around, the fire was extinguished and the washtub still inverted in the front yard. The officers supposed that the women of the house had been washing clothes and passed on.

Old man Norris has been a minister of the gospel. Why he should have settled and passed the last 25 years of his life in the wilds of the mountains of De Kalb no one has ever heard him tell. He was born in the Greenville district of South Carolina and was the son of William Norris, who was killed at sea in the war of 1812. He was married early in life and moved to the Lawrence district, S. C., where he and his wife lived for 12 years, and where five children—two girls and three boys—were born to them. His business at that time was clock and lock making and repairing.

After 12 years his wife died. His grief was very great, and in his sorrow he turned toward the religion of his father and became an evangelical preacher. Incidentally he worked at his trade. Later, in De Kalb county, Ala., he married Miss Armanda Nations. She lived but ten months, and then, having returned to his trade, he again forsook it and resumed his labors as an evangelist. He was now 40 years old. He journeyed westward and traveled over the entire west. He remained in the west for about 30 years, experiencing all sorts of adventures and seeing western life in all of its exciting phases. Since then he has given up all notion of preaching.

In 1860 he came to Alabama, settled in Cherokee county and married Miss Pitts. Although over 70 years old at the time, he became by his first wife the father of five more children, all of whom are living at his home in the mountains.

The old man lives comfortably and has a good property. It is said that he made considerable money for the benefit of his friends and neighbors rather than for his own profit. Molds, metal and some of the spurious coins were found by the officers in his possession, but the neighborhood belief is that he made the goods not only as a favor to his friends, but also for the love of accomplishing a difficult mechanical task.

A Suicide's Fantastic Excuse.

Many are the motives of suicide, but no man ever gave a more fantastic excuse for taking his own life than the late Adolphe Rose, who killed himself because the anarchists declined to blow him up. The singular ambition of his wayward career was to die of a bomb, and as no bomb would explode in his native Orthodox naught remained but to blow out his brains with a revolver pistol. Nor did Adolphe Rose fail for lack of industry. He did what he could to arouse the anarchists. He wrote insulting letters to all those companions whose acquaintance he could procure and he very confessed that he was a renegade. But these compliments left his letters unanswered, and the days and nights grew daily more disconsolate. His last thought was for the revolutionaire, to whom he had given up his existence, and he wrote: "Dear Sir—I have broken with you. You will not kill me. But I have written to the Chief of Police. I have informed him of your plot against the Emperor and the King of Italy."

Two Old Gentlemen Hanged.

A Literal Portraiture From the Description In a Popular Novel.

As many readers of fiction have had cause to complain, authors and artists often work at cross purposes, and the novelist's eloquent conception of the heroine's personal attributes is but faintly followed forth in the artist's lines. To show how a heroine of romantic fiction actually looks our esteemed contemporary, The Pathfinder, handed to a realistic artist a chapter from a popular novel with instructions to make a literal portrait of the heroine.

Here are the eloquent words of the author from which the faithful portrait was drawn:

"Belinda was the fairest of earth's daughters. Her shapely head was molded in the form of a perfect oval, poised gracefully on a swanlike neck. Her delicate, shell-like ears looked fragile as the thinnest porcelain. Over her alabaster forehead rested a tiara of golden locks that fell in a shower all adown her graceful form. Her eyes were perfect arches and underneath them, like windows to her soul, shone two the brightest lights ever looked upon, a pair of stars gleaming forth resplendent. Her nose was her only commanding feature—slightly retroussé, but redeemed somewhat by the cunning little dimple. Her chin was a dimpled puzzle; her lips, like twin cherries, opened to reveal a row of teeth that had the semblance of a string of pink white pearls. What wonder then that, with all those varied charms of face she should have had the easy confident gait of one that knew the irresistible power of her own beauty."

If artists generally were more literal, perhaps authors would be less free in their word portraitures.

SHE HAS NO WINGS.

But Mrs. Merry Befriends the Scorchers and Is Called the "Bicycle Angel."

Mrs. E. S. Merry of New York is known to her admiring friends as the "Bicycle Angel." Mrs. Merry is a widow with a good stated income and is one of the most active members of the L. A. W. In an interview with a New York World reporter Mrs. Merry described her record as a bicycle angel as follows:

"My first appearance in the angel role was before I got the range. One of the oldest cyclists in the city had been arrested for fast riding and was taken to the Sixty-eighth Street station house. I was the nearest friend of whom he could think at the time, and he sent a note to me. I went over and bailed him out. That was my first bail offense, but it didn't prove my last.

"When Mr. De Witt waged that war on cyclists without lamps, I took up the riders' cause. I took a position down on the drive, and whenever riders came along without a lamp or with the light out I rushed out and warned them. In that way a number were saved from arrest and trouble. I do that to this day. I don't go down on the road to make it a special work, but wherever I am riding or standing still and see riders without lamps lighted I always speak and caution them. It is dangerous for them as well as for other people.

"I bailed out 14 of the riders who were arrested on Mr. De Witt's charges, and I paid their fines. It was during the excitement that I went to the club one night. Everybody was telling his grievances when the president pulled me out into the center of the room and said, 'We will now have a speech by the cyclists' friend.' That was the first title applied to me, and the riders soon converted it into the 'Bicycle Angel.'

"You know I'm not a fast rider. I haven't been riding very long, and I don't mind confessing that it took 20 lessons before I was able to get around the academy alone. I'm proud of being an L. A. W. consul, to which position I was appointed at the Asbury Park meet.

"What do I think about cycling costumes for women? Why, bloomers are the thing. There is no doubt about that. But I do not wear them. How could I? Why, I have got off my wheel many a time and trounced the boys who yelled after me, 'See the big woman!' and similar things. When I began to ride, I was a nervous wreck and weighed 247 pounds. Now I weigh 207 pounds, and really I think I never knew what happiness was until I took to the wheel. I enjoy every moment of life now."

How To Prevent Croup.

Some reading that will prove interesting to young mothers. How to guard against the disease.

Croup is a terror to young mothers and to post them concerning the cause, first symptoms and treatment is the object of this item. The origin of croup is a common cold. Children who are subject to it take cold very easily and croup is almost sure to follow. The first symptom is hoarseness; this is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough, which is easily recognized and will never be forgotten by one who has heard it. The time to act is when the child first becomes hoarse. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is freely given all tendency to croup will soon disappear. Even after the croupy cough has developed it will prevent the attack. There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains nothing injurious. For sale by L. H. Flocken druggist.

Satolli Not Going to Rome.

It was authoritatively stated recently in Washington that the recent report of Mgr. Satolli's purpose to go to Rome to attend the pope's jubilee in January next were untrue. Dr. Rooker, secretary to the delegate, says Mgr. Satolli has not determined to go to Rome at that time or at any future time, nor has he even considered such a trip. He has received no request from the Vatican to be present and he has asked for no leave of absence such as would be necessary. The report has been used as the basis of speculative stories as to the purposes of Mgr. Satolli's visit, it being stated that he would not again return to America, but would be succeeded by another prelate. In view of the fact that he is not going in January all these speculative stories are inventions.—Washington Post.

Exasperating.

"When a man is so turrible delib'rate as Asy Trumbull, there's times when he's downright aggravatin," said Miss Melinda Sprawle, referring to her brother-in-law.

"Why, what's poor Asy done now?" inquired little Mrs. Pollock, Miss Sprawle's oldest sister, with whom that capable but uncompromising spinster resided.

"He wears me out—that's jest all there is to it," snapped Miss Melinda. "How in the world M'hitty come to marry such a snail tongue I don't know. If ever I get him passed through this sickness without my nerves givin' out, it'll be more'n I expect. M'hitty's no more good in a sickroom than a cat would be. It's all she can do to cook the gruel stuff an keep out fr'm under foot. It's all I ask of her."

"Ain't Asy's fever left him?" asked Mrs. Pollock timidly.

"Yes, it has," returned Miss Sprawle, "an it's left him slower'n ever. I have to ask him questions three times over before I can git a word out of him, an then he'll say: 'Don't—hurry me, M'lindy. Lemme think a min-ute.' My land!"

"An this mornin," said Miss Sprawle in a tone of exasperation, "this mornin while I was out givin M'hitty a piece o' my mind in the henyard jest to ease my feelin's a mite I heard a thump in the house an then a couple o' groans.

"I run into the kitchen bedroom, where Asy's been in this sickness, an there he was on the floor. I'd left him fast asleep about ten minutes before.

"'Well Asy Trumbull,' says I, 'how did you manage to fall out o' bed?'

"An he looked up at me, jest as calm as a clock, an says he, 'By de-grees, M'lindy, I pre-sume.'

"My land!" said Miss Sprawle as she retied her bonnet strings in a hard knot and prepared to return to the Trumbull mansion. "My land!" And there speech deserted her, and in grim silence she opened and shut Mrs. Pollock's kitchen door and stalked down the road on her self appointed mission.—Youth's Companion.

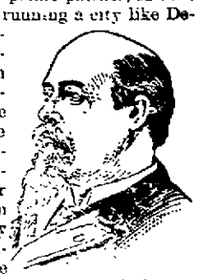
DETROIT'S BRAINY MAYOR.

He Has a Convict Labor Scheme and a Presidential Boom.

Mayor Pingree has broken out again and in a new spot. The people are never unprepared, however, for a fresh eruption from the versatile Detroit executive. His resources are not bound by the limitations of a few potato patches, and the little matter of running a city like Detroit and capturring the nomination for a fourth term does not occupy the Pingree intellect to the exclusion of other weighty concerns. Mayor Pingree has been making a study of the convict labor problem. He believes that the convicts should be placed on a state farm and employed at fancy farming, such as raising French peas and mushrooms and other products that do not compete with the ordinary farm products. He believes they can be taught in this manner to have a genuine love for the soil and can thus be started in a useful and productive pursuit that will to a large extent destroy the criminal tendency. Simultaneous with Pingree's statement of his plan for the employment of convicts comes the launching of his presidential boom in a Detroit paper. Recent events showing Pingree's popularity indicate that Pingree as a presidential possibility is not so much of a joke after all.



H. S. PINGREE.

All of which shows what a new kind of brain may do in a country where there is no law against fecundity of ideas.—Chicago Times-Herald.

MAUD'S BUTTER BILL.

Mr. Gratebar's Surprise, Concerning Which It Were Well to Be Warned.

"The most remarkable bill I ever received came in today," said Mr. Gratebar. "It was from my oldest daughter, Maud. Maud doesn't eat butter, and never did. We used to try to get her to eat it, but she never would, and we stopped trying. I am quite sure that there could be no more indulgent father than myself, but at the same time I am quite willing to admit that it had sometimes occurred to me that if Maud wouldn't eat butter, why, it was just so much net saving in the household expenses, and so I was all the more surprised—startled, as one might say—when I received a bill, of which the following is a copy:

New York, Oct. 31, 1895.

W. Gratebar, Esq. To Maud Gratebar, Dr.

Terms cash.

For 18 years' butter supply, at $12 per annum, $216.

"I don't know where Maud got the figures, but I suppose that she and her mother must have figured on the family butter bills enough to reach approximately the annual cost per head. The real joke about this bill, however, is that it will have to be paid. 'You would have paid for the butter if I had eaten it as I went along, wouldn't you?' asks Maud, to which I say, 'Certainly.' 'Then why shouldn't you pay for it now?' says Maud. This reasoning is of course irresistible, and if it were not it is re-enforced by the fact that, with winter approaching, Maud needs a whole lot of new things, and so there is nothing for me to do but to draw a check for the amount.

"But we must get Maud to begin eating butter or I must establish a butter sinking fund, for Maud's net bill might come in at a time when I was not so well prepared to meet it."—New York Sun.

Political Career Predicted For the Duchess.

The West Side Women's Republican auxiliary of New York held a meeting the other day. The women called it a political symposium. Mrs. Clarence Burns, who looks like Mrs. Potter Palmer and is president of the club, talked about women's part in English elections. During the last campaign four fair American women took part in their husband's canvasses. "So," said the president, "the future Duchess of Marlborough, Miss Vanderbilt, will have something to look forward to in this direction."

The wife of a titled politician who was campaigning in a royal constituency was asked what she was going to wear. "The oldest clothes I have, on account of the eggs," was her reply. Men and boys in England on election day parade the streets with wheelbarrows labeled: "Election eggs, three a penny. Notice—Not sold for human food."—New York World.

Agriculture In Great Britain.

The fact that agriculture is in process of gradual abandonment in Great Britain may account in part for the increase in immigration from that country, the number of arrivals since August aggregating 238,000. It evidently does not pay the British farmer to raise wheat on high priced British land. The next problem is to make this land profitable in some other way. The decline in wheat acreage this year is 26 per cent less than 1894. This indicates that upward of 200,000 acres of land have failed of cultivation because agriculture no longer pays.—Philadelphia Times.

Their Excuse.

The southern excuse for such horrible burnings as the one in Tyler, Tex., is found in the striking words from the dispatch. "He begged for mercy, and it was meted out to him just as he was merciful to the pure and innocent woman whose soul he sent to heaven at this hour yesterday." There is grim tragedy, but not a spirit of Christian forgiveness, in these words.—Boston Journal.

Asparagus Endorsed.

THE USE OF ASPARAGUS IN MEDICINE OFFICIALLY RECOGNIZED.

Eminent French Physicians Have Found It Valuable—What the "U. S. Health Reports" Say About Sparagus Kidney Pills and Their Curative Powers.

Asparagus is a kidney tonic.

It builds up and invigorates the kidneys, and cures them from the effects of injuries, overwork, etc.

Doctors agree that Asparagus is good for the kidneys, but no strong extract with all the medicinal properties had been prepared until Dr. Hobb prepared it from the roots by a special process of his own.

He found this so successful that he made it up into pills, with some few other ingredients, and used them in his private practice for years.

This was the origin of Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

French physicians of repute have carefully tested Asparagus in all kidney troubles, and consider it of great value.

Now the United States Health Reports, Vol. XXIV., No. 2, has this to say about Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills:

"Dr. Dio Lewis said: Nineteen diseases out of twenty originate from diseased kidneys, and those who have made pathology a study will agree with this eminent physician that where the kidneys fail to perform their functions in any way the whole system becomes enervated and the body diseased. When the kidneys fail to perform their wonted task, effete and injurious matter is carried to all parts of the body. Through a mistaken diagnosis, these symptoms are often pronounced separate and distinct diseases, but as a matter of fact they can only be cured by remedies which reach and relieve the overworked kidneys and strengthen them, so that they can successfully act their part as cleansers of the body, thereby insuring regularity, strength and good health throughout the entire system.

"Among all the remedies claiming to perform this much desired result, and which have been investigated by the compilers of these Reports, it has been found that while there was much to commend there was much to be desired. It is, therefore, with more than ordinary pleasure, after a most painstaking investigation, and a long and careful examination of the results achieved by the remedy placed upon the market by the Hobb's Medicine Co., known as Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills, that we pronounce this preparation a kidney remedy par-excellence, and one that will speedily and effectually cure all diseases of the kidneys, whatever their origin or name, or however chronic or deep-seated they may be.

"During a quarter of a century of journalism, during which time we have exercised a watchful care over many of the preparations having for their object the cure of kidney diseases, we have never come across a preparation of such merit as Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills."

By eating Asparagus a slight effect is had on the kidneys, but the greater part of the curative property of the plant is not absorbed and goes to waste.

The extract of Asparagus, however, as prepared by Dr. Hobb contains all the active curative elements so prepared that they are at once absorbed and do their work of curing the kidneys without waste or loss.

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills cure all kidney diseases and all blood diseases, such as Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Anaemia, etc.

They will cure when other remedies will not even relieve.

For sale by all druggists, or mailed prepaid for 50 cents a box.

Write for valuable pamphlet "A Filter for Your Blood," free on application to Hobb's Medicine Co., Chicago or San Francisco.

FOR SHORTER CAMPAIGNS.

We believe that next year, perhaps better than in any preceding year, the experiment of a short campaign might successfully be tried. The voters are well informed on the issues of the campaign. They have had a disastrous experience with Democracy, and they are ready to vote for a change whenever the opportunity is given them.—Syracuse Post.

The disturbing and damaging influence on business of exciting political contests has been demonstrated so often that every organization which exists in the interest of trade is justified in calling for their abbreviation. Aside from the evil effects on business, there is the general discomfort of unnecessary contention and suspense without any recommend in the way of substantial benefits. Two months would be plenty of time to arouse the voters to a sense of their duty, and three ought to be the very outside limit.—Kansas City Star.

Fast Railway Time.

Apropos of railway racing, a French paper tells the following story of meridianal exaggeration: An Englishman and a Marseillais were disputing which was the faster train, the express to Edinburgh or the "rapide" to Marseilles. The southerner finally clinched the matter with the following anecdote: "Look here," he said. "The 'rapide' is the fastest train in the world, and here's the proof of it: The other day I was getting on board at Paris when the station master said something that annoyed me. My blood was up. I aimed a blow at him, when the train suddenly started, and it was the station master at Avignon who had his ears boxed."—London Globe.

HE LEFT HIS GOLD.

And Burglars Have Since Tried to Get It From the Hotel Safe.

A fourth attempt was recently made to rob the safe of the American House at Bloomfield, N. J., which, it was supposed, contained $4,500 in gold, deposited there five years ago by Raymond Welsh. Who Raymond Welsh was, where he came from or where he went to nobody knows.

He went to the American House five years ago, and the register gives New York as his residence. He was a tall, square man, and wore a neat looking Prince Albert coat and a silk hat. From his accent he was supposed to be an Irishman. A simple valise constituted his entire baggage. He remained quietly at the hotel for three days, scarcely leaving the house. One night he called William Courter, the proprietor, to his room.

"Mr. Courter," he said, "I want you to take care of some money for me."

With that he reached under the mattress of his bed and drew out two canvas bags. "There's $4,500 in gold in those two bags," said Welsh. "Count it and see."

Courter opened the bags and poured a quantity of gold pieces upon the bed. There were three old California $50 slugs, made in San Francisco in 1851, a few English sovereigns, but most of the money was in $20 gold pieces.

"What are you doing with all this gold?" asked Courter.

"Well, I may go where I'll need it," replied Welsh, with a smile. "Besides, I am just going to be married, and why shouldn't a man spend gold on his honeymoon?"

Courter gave Welsh a receipt for $4,500 and put the gold in the safe in the barroom. The next day Welsh did not appear at the hotel. He has never been seen since, and several unsuccessful attempts have been made to rob the safe.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

DR. TALMAGE'S NEW HOME.

He Will Lease It For the Present and Live at a Hotel.

Although Dr. Talmage has bought a house in Washington and purposes to have all his household goods moved presently to that city, it is not likely that he will quit his present quarters at the Arlington within the year. Dr. Talmage has taken Mrs. Ann Cole's old home at 1400½ Massachusetts avenue. It is one of the oldest houses in that part of the city and adjoins the newer annex now occupied by Assistant Secretary Hamlin of the treasury.

Dr. Talmage will take the larger house, which will be furnished throughout with his own effects, except his library, which has already been installed at the Arlington, and in this condition it will be leased for a year. There is a large amount of beautiful and valuable material that Dr. Talmage has collected in his journeyings, especially in the far east, many handsome rugs and carvings and quite a collection of pictures. These will all be placed in his new Washington home.

Mrs. Cole's furniture will be sold at auction next Tuesday, and she will take up her residence temporarily at another of her houses, after which she may go to Brooklyn to spend the balance of the winter with her brother, Hon. Horatio King, who will occupy the Talmage property, for which Mrs. Cole's Washington property was exchanged.—Washington Post.

His Dancin Days.

What is it in old fiddle tunes 'at makes me
ketch my breath
And ripples up my back bone tell I'm tickled
'most to death?
Kind o' like that sweet sick feelin in the long sweep of a swing—
Yer first sweetheart in with ye, sailin up'ards, wing to wing;
Yer first picnic, yer first ice cream, yer first of ever'thing
'At happened 'fore yer dancin days wuz over!

I never understood it, and I s'pose I never can,
But right in town here yesterd'y I heard a poor blind man
A-fiddlin old "Gray Eagle," Jerked my hide and stopped my hoof
O' hay and listened at 'im—yes and watched the way he "bowed"—
And back I went, plum forty year', with boys and girls I knowed
And loved long 'fore my dancin days wuz over!

At high noon in yer city, with yer blame magnetic cars
A-humpin and a-kerswoshin past, and hands and O. A. R.'s
A-marchin, and firs tayin's—all the noise the whole street through Wuz lost on me. I only heard a whippoorwill or two,
It 'peared like kind o' callin 'crost the dark
ne-s and the dew,
Them nights afore my dancin days wuz over!

'T'uz Chas'ty night at Wethergill's, er Wa'n's d'y night at Strawn's,
Er Fourth o' July night at either Tomps'
house or John's;
With old Lew Cusch from Sugar Crick and that old fiddle he
Had "sawed" clean through the army, from Atlanty to the sea,
And yit he'd fetched her home ag'in, so's he could play for me
'Jes' more afore my dancin days wuz over!

The woods 'at's all be'n cut away seemed growin sorto there:
The youngsters all wuz Days ag'in 'at's now
all ordish men,
And all the girls 'at then wuz girls—I saw
'em, one and all,
As plain as them—the middle sized, the short and fat and tall,
And, 'peared like, I danced "Tucker" fer 'em
up and down the hall
As yer first sweetheart in my dancin days wuz over!

The fact is, I was dazed so 'at I clean forget jes' where
I really was, a little ten streets, and still a stranger there!
I heard the jes'ice yellin, but my ears wuz kind o' hummed—
My eyes, too, for the odds o' that, bekase I thought I heard
My wife, at's dead, a laughin like and jokin, word fer word,
Jes like afore her dancin days wuz over!

THE TWIGS

Entertained at the Home of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Hane.

The "Twigs"entertained at the home of Mr and Mrs. J. J. Hane, of east Center street, Friday afternoon.

Pedro was the game of the afternoon and after a spirited contest of twelve games it was found that Miss Hane was the fortunate one to secure the prize, a dainty pearl and enamel stick pin.

At 5:30 o'clock the "Twigs" and their guests, Messrs M. A. Turney, E. K. Uhler, J. S. Duff, L. B. McNeal, A. F. McNeal, H. B. Hane, J. W. Nelson and J. I. Beatty, sat down to a maghificent turkey dinner and the fact that the gentlemen had labored the greater part of the day did not in the least mar their relish for the good things set before them.

A FRIGHTFUL FALL

THE AGED BETSY MUNSON SERIOUSLY IF NOT FATALLY HURT.

She Walks Into the Excavation Made for the Cellar Under the Darmody Building. It Was a Pitiful Predicament for the Poor Old Woman.

A frightful accident occurred to poor old Betsy Munson a little after 6 o'clock Friday night, which is quite liable, owing to her extreme age, to result fatally.

As is well known Betsy is quite infirm and her sight none the best, and as she was walking home fell into the excavation which extends out in front of the Darmody block.

As she approached the dangerous place from the west there was no warning light, no barricade, absolutely nothing to give her warning that the locality was a dangerous one, and she walked across the alley crossing and stooped over the cellar wall and fell upon the mud and stones ten feet below.

The accident was discovered almost instantly and quickly citizens were running here and there summoning carriages, the police and medical assistance.

Dr. H. Chisholm quickly responded to the call and by the light of a lantern made out that her left leg had suffered a compound fracture at the knee.

After a tedious wait a horse blanket was secured and willing hands lifted the injured woman into the blanket and up out of the cellar, but again a long wait was caused by the non-arrival of a carriage.

Finally a hack came up and Miss Munson was lifted from the street into the carriage and driven to her home on Ballantine avenue, where a more extensive examination of her injuries was made.

When the aged woman had been taken home and a more thorough examination of her wound could be made it was discovered that it was the knee cap that was broken and protruding through the flesh, the flesh being torn open almost all the way around the leg, by far a more serious wound than was at first supposed.

A THRIFTY FAKIR

Was Compelled To Suspend Business on the Streets.

An old soldier put in his appearance at the office of the mayor this afternoon and asked permission to sell "razorine" on the streets. He said that he had no money and wanted to make a dollar or two to get out of town. 'Squire McKinley, acting mayor, told him to go ahead.

In a few minutes word was received at the 'Squire's office that the man was selling "razorine," a cake of soap, obscene pictures and songs all for twenty-five cents. The 'Squire put on his hat and went down to see the fakir. He was doing a land office business, but the 'Squire walked up and, tapping him on the shoulder, informed him that he was getting too thrifty and he had better get off the street. He did so. He endeavored to be allowed to proceed, but Mr. McKinley refused.

Fractured His Leg.

John Horton, residing five miles northeast of the city, met with an accident Thursday night that will lay him up for some time. He was attending to some chores about the barn, and in climbing up in the loft lost his footing and fell to the floor below. He was picked up and carried to the house, after which Dr. F. W. Thomas was called.

It was found that he had received a severe fracture of his left leg.

STROBEL CO CHANGES.

W. H. Parkinson Gets a Leave-of-Absence and Fred Strobel Becomes an Active Omcial.

The directors of The Strobel Manufacturing company held a meeting at the home of W. H. Parkinson, Friday evening and made several changes in the executive organization. W. H. Parkinson resigned as secretary and U. K. Guthery was elected in his stead. As treasurer, Mr. Parkinson was granted a leave-of-absence to extendd to a time when Mr. Parkinson's health will permit him resuming active work. He soon leaves for Arizona.

In the changes made, Mrs. C. M. Sellers, recently of Mt. Vernon, was appointed bookkeeper, and Fred Strobel was elected superintendent of the works.

A plan of campaign was mapped out whereby it is expected to materially extend the business. The field of manufacture seems a most promising one.

IT IS UNFORTUNATE

THE AMERICAN ASPHALT COMPANY HAVING HARD LUCK.

It Has Been Found Necessary To Take Up the Concrete on Prospect Street from Columbia to Hill Street—A Serious Delay.

The American Asphalt company is experiencing some very hard luck at present, and, as the representatives of the company claim, without any fault upon its part.

Some time since it was announced in the STAR that Prospect street had been concreted from end to end and was ready for the coating of asphalt.

At the time there was every indication that the statement was true enough but it appears, now, that it was all a mistake so far as the statement went that the street was ready for the asphalt.

It appears that the subsoil was spongy under the concrete and as soon as the frost was taken out of the ground by the recent warm weather the concrete began to sink in places.

The result of the matter was that it was found necessary to take up all the concrete from Columbia street to the brow of the hill with the exception of a stretch about 150 feet long about midway between those points, and it is possible that it also will have to be taken up.

The concrete thus taken from Prospect street is being hauled to Delaware avenue and piled along the avenue to be used in making the subgrade for the brick pavement.

As the concrete is being removed from Prospect street the street is being rolled and wherever there are soft spots stone is being rolled into the soil

It is hoped by the contractors that by this method a firm subsoil may be secured and thus the work prosecuted as rapidly as possible.

In any event the loss of the American Asphalt company will be not a little and it is to be especially regretted at this time when winter is so near at hand.

Amusement and Business!

WE should like to focus the opinion of Marion newspaper readers and get their view of much of the dry goods advertising. The variety of claims, the excessive boasting, the ill-founded assumption of superiority that is so thin than anybody can see through—these things must mix up a great deal of amusement with a business announcement.

We challenge a contradiction to the claim of good faith in all our advertising. The last dry goods house to be established, modestly begun in a small room, is today—by the verdict of Marion county's trading people—the first great store of Marion. Deception couldn't triumph like that.

Childre n's Fleeced Vests and Pants at 25c.
Gents' All-wool Camels Hair Shirts and Drawers the $1 25 quality at 75c.
Gents' Fleeced Jersey Underwear at 50c is a bargain shown only by us.
75c here $1.00 other places is the way Ladies' Outing Flannel Night Dresses sell. Ours are full width and length. No better outing made.

Dress Goods.

Can't use slow sellers in this stock. 39c and 50c lines have been gone over. Saturday they go on two piles--one at 19c, one at 25c. They are all-wool choice styles but sold too slow.

Umbrellas.

100 English Gloria Rain Umbrellas, 28 inch steel rod, mounted Congo stick, at $1.00.
Gents' English Gloria Umbrella 28 inch buckhorn handle, special at $1.50.
